PICTURE FRAMES OR REAL AIR CONDITIONING

Picture frames are nice to hold photographs but not to house an air conditioning system. If you really want to eliminate a wall mount air conditioner and have a energy efficient and serviceable system, the Fujitsu Concealed Ceiling Fan Coil is the option for you. For years, one of the drawbacks of ductless air conditioning was that you had to have a wall mounted unit in your living space. The Wall Mount, also known as a fan coil or air handler is vital because it provides the fan that circulates the conditioned air into the room. Wall mounts decrease usable wall space and detract from the architecture or interior design of the living space. While new models are ultra-quiet, they still produce sound because they are installed in the living space. Fujitsu's new Concealed Ceiling units eliminate having anything on the wall. They are installed in the ceiling space and can be ducted short distances. This results in the appearance of a central ducted system with all of the benefits of a ductless system. You have the zone control capability to cool only the occupied rooms and the high energy efficiency of up to 16 SEER. The system is available in dual, tri and quad zone sizes that allow you to have only one outdoor unit.

Fujitsu Goes "Off the Wall" with New Concealed Ceiling Fan Coils. The Central A/C look with the Energy Savings and Zoning of Ductless.
